Colonel Senn is the commander of the First Kearny Regiment, one of the most elite units in the Republic of the Sphere and the pillar of strength supporting Tara Campbell's Highlanders.

Caden Senn is descended from five generations of Kearny Highlander warriors, a proud tradition that he takes very seriously. His early career consisted largely of training and parades, as there had been little conflict for more than sixty years, but when each planet was cast into isolation due to the destruction of the HPG network, Senn seems to have known what was coming next. Although he managed to quell unrest on his own planet via strength of arms, he was frustrated at his inability to extend his unit's influence due to a lack of interstellar Jump-Ships.

When Tara Campbell arrived and requested that the First Kearny join her crusade to hold together the crumbling Republic, he pledged his unit's loyalty to her cause – but apparently not to her. We have reports that he is dubious about her youth, but this is perhaps tempered by the fact that she has seen more actual combat than he has. This tension between Senn and Campbell is a potential rift that we should try to exploit.

Following the success of Clan Diamond Shark's Mad Cat Mk II design – which took the venerable Mad Cat and increased its tonnage and lethality – Clan Ghost Bear attempted its own "new" conversion: the Ryoken II. It walked off the assembly lines in 3075 at the height of the WoB war.

A Ghost Bear MechWarrior who fought alongside House Kurita to take back the world of Dieron in 3077 originally piloted GB002-78G. Its profile tricked the defenders into believing it was a standard Ryoken, which quickly proved their undoing.

It was damaged badly enough in this conflict that it was abandoned on Dieron, where it was later picked up as salvage by the Second Kearny Highlanders as they moved through Dieron on a mop-up mission. Though it took several years to refurbish, it has since held a place of honor in the unit, and its most recent pilot, Caden Senn, has named it "Undod," or unity.
